

Steven Rattner is currently a fellow of Brown University and a member of the Council on Foreign Relations. Until July 2009, Rattner served as counselor to the Secretary of the U.S. Treasury and led the Obama Administration's efforts to restructure the auto industry. Prior to joining the Treasury Department in February 2009, he was a managing principal of Quadrangle Group LLC, a private investment firm with more than $6 billion of assets under management. Until March 2000, Rattner was with Lazard Frères and Co., where he served as deputy chairman and deputy chief executive officer. He has served as a board member or trustee of a number of public and philanthropic organizations, including the Educational Broadcasting Corporation (as chairman), the Metropolitan Museum of Art, the Mayor's Fund to Advance New York City (as chairman), the Brookings Institution and the New America Foundation.