

Thomas T. Stallkamp is an industrial partner with Ripplewood Holdings, LLC, a private equity firm in New York, and the founder and principal of Collaborative Management, LLC, a private business consulting firm. From 2000 to 2004, he was chief executive officer of MSX International, a business outsourcing firm. Prior to becoming vice chairman of DaimlerChrysler Corporation in 1999, Stallkamp was its president and a member of its board of management. During his tenure at Chrysler, the company achieved the highest profit per unit of any major automobile manufacturer. Stallkamp became known for developing new business processes and enhanced partnerships with the automotive supply community, thereby improving product quality and cost efficiencies. Under his leadership, Chrysler developed its Extended Enterprise™ concept and introduced SCORE (Supplier Cost Reduction Effort) as a structured approach to work jointly with suppliers to make cost, product, and process improvements. He is the author of SCORE!: A Better Way to Do Business: Moving from Conflict to Collaboration (2005), which details how firms can implement collaborative relationships. He currently serves on the boards of Baxter International, Inc., Borg Warner, Honsel International Technologies (Belgium), and AsahiTec (Japan). He is also chairman of the board of trustees at Babson College. Stallkamp holds a BS in industrial management and economics and an MBA from Miami University. He was awarded honorary doctorate degrees from Georgetown University and Miami University.
