

Maria Hibbs

Maria P. Hibbs is the executive director of The Partnership for New Communities, a collaborative of Chicago business, civic, and philanthropic leaders supporting the city's massive effort to transform public housing and revitalize city neighborhoods.

Ms. Hibbs joined The Partnership in 2003, after more than 20 years managing the public and governmental affairs and corporate communications functions of major Fortune 500 companies in the Chicagoland area. Before her work with The Partnership, Ms. Hibbs was vice president of Corporate Communications for NiSource Inc., one of the nation's largest integrated energy providers. In her 13 years with Chicago-based Inland Steel Industries, a leading U.S. steel producer, Ms. Hibbs led the company's federal, state and local government relations function and directed the activities of the Inland Steel-Ryerson Foundation.

Ms. Hibbs holds a bachelor's degree in journalism and English from Valparaiso University, a master's degree in journalism from Ball State University, and a doctoral degree in public policy analysis from the University of Illinois at Chicago.
