

Arthur Wheaton is director of Western NY Labor and Environmental Programs for the Worker Institute at Cornell and Scheinman Institute on Conflict Resolution. His expertise includes industry education and workplace training, high performance work systems, negotiations, conflict resolution, as well as auto and aerospace industrial relations.

Prior to joining the ILR faculty in 1999, Wheaton was with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he was project manager for the Labor Aerospace Research Agenda. Previously, he was a labor education specialist at Michigan State University. Wheaton has served as executive board member and steward for the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO in Michigan.

The author of numerous publications, Wheaton earned a BA in multidisciplinary social science with a concentration in political science, history, and economics at Michigan State University. He has an MLIR from the Michigan State School of Labor and Industrial Relations.